- accounting balance sheet as of December 31, 2019;

- statement of changes in equity;
- cash flow statement;

Basis for Audit Opinion

We have conducted this audit in accordance with the requirements of the Law of the Republic of Belarus dated July 12, 2013 "On Audit Activities" and national rules of audit. Our obligations under the legislation of the Republic of Belarus are described in details in the Section “Obligations of an audit organization for conducting an audit of accounting (financial) statements” of this report.

We have observed the principle of independence in relation to the auditee in accordance with the requirements of the legislation of the Republic of Belarus and the norms of professional ethics.

We believe that in the course of the audit we have obtained sufficient and appropriate audit data, which can be a basis for our audit opinion.

Key audit issues

As a result of the audit, we have determined that there are no key audit issues to be reported in this audit report.

Auditee management’s responsibilities for the preparation of accounting (financial) statements

The management of Unitsky String Technologies Co. is responsible for the preparation and faithful submission of accounting (financial) statements in accordance with the legislation of the Republic of Belarus on accounting and reporting; organization of the internal control system, which shall ensure the preparation of consistent accounting (financial) statements that have no essential misstatements resulting from fraud and (or) errors; assessment of the ability to maintain its activities continuously and appropriateness of application of the going concern principle, when preparing accounting statements, as well as for proper disclosure of information related to the going concern in the accounting statements, as appropriate.

Audit organization’s responsibilities for the audit of accounting (financial) statements

The purpose of our audit is to obtain reasonable assurance that the accounting (financial) statements of the auditee do not contain essential misstatements due to errors and (or) fraud and to draw up an audit report containing an opinion.

Reasonable assurance is a high level of confidence, but it is not a guarantee that the audit conducted in compliance with the national auditing rules allows identifying all available essential misstatements.

Misstatements can arise as a result of errors and (or) fraud and are considered essential if it may be reasonably assumed that, either individually or jointly, they can affect the economic decisions of the users of accounting (financial) statements.

As part of the audit conducted in compliance with the national rules for auditing, we apply professional judgment and maintain professional skepticism throughout the audit.

In addition, we do the following:

- identify and assess the risks of essential misstatement of accounting statements due to errors and (or) fraud; develop and implement audit procedures in accordance with the estimated risks; obtain the audit evidence being sufficient and appropriate to serve as a basis for expressing the audit opinion. The risk of failure to detect essential misstatements of accounting statements as a result of fraud is higher than the risk of detection of misstatements as a result of error, since fraud usually implies the existence of specially developed measures aimed at its concealment;

- obtain an understanding of the internal control system of the auditee, which is relevant to the audit in order to plan audit procedures that are appropriate to the circumstances of the audit, but not to express an opinion on the system effectiveness;
- evaluate the proper nature of the accounting policies applied, as well as the relevancy of accounting estimates and the corresponding disclosure of information in the accounting statements;
- evaluate the correctness of applying of the going concern principle by the management of the auditee, and on the basis of the audit evidence obtained, conclude whether there is a significant uncertainty in connection with events or conditions that may raise significant doubts in the ability of the auditee to continue as a going concern. If we come to the conclusion that there is such a significant uncertainty, we should draw attention to the relevant disclosure of this information in the accounting statements in the audit report. In case such disclosure of information is not available, or is inappropriate, we must modify our opinion. Our conclusions are based on the audit evidence received prior to the date of signing the audit report, however, the future event or conditions may lead to the auditee losing its ability to continue as a going concern;
- assess the overall presentation of accounting (financial) statements, its structure and content, including disclosure of information, as well as whether the accounting statements provide a reliable understanding of the underlying operations and events.

We carry out informational interaction with persons charged with management responsibilities, informing them, among other things, about the planned scope and timing of the audit, as well as the significant issues raised during the audit, including significant deficiencies in the internal control system.

We also provide the persons charged with management responsibilities with the statement that all the requirements for the observance of the principle of independence have been fulfilled, and information on all relationships and other issues, that can reasonably be considered as threats of violation of the principle of independence and, if necessary, all precautions has been brought to their attention. Among the issues brought to the attention of persons charged with management responsibilities, we select key audit issues and disclose these issues in the audit report, unless disclosure of information on these issues is prohibited by law, or when we reasonably come to the conclusion that the negative consequences of reporting such information will exceed the benefit of its disclosure.
